

... there was a deafening silence. On a quiet May day bullets rang out into a crowd at Kent State University in Ohio. Four college students were killed. Their blood was our blood and the guilt for their deaths extended far beyond the National Guard. What can be said about a society that kills its youth?

WE WERE ONE IN HORROR, ONE IN SORROW,
ONE IN ANGER!

A cloud of disgust covered the campus. CAMBODIA, KENT STATE, JACKSON STATE — how could such senseless things happen in this land of "reason." College life collapsed amidst faculty and student strikes. The engineering students joined the collective cry. The school closed as it had the year before, in turmoil. The "new" decade was not really new ...
