About:

Ana Paula Koury earned her PhD in Urban Environmental Structures from the Architecture and Urbanism University of São Paulo (2005). Currently she is a professor at the University São Judas Tadeu in São Paulo (since 2003) where she teaches disciplines of Housing policies and urbanization in Brazil, as well as Social-Economic Studies, Theory and History of Architecture and Urbanism. Since 2013, she coordinates with Fernando Lara on a new schedule for urban and environmental policies in Brazil with FAPESP and the support of University of Texas.

From 2005 to 2013, she managed The Pioneers of Social Housing project with Nabil Bonduki, which gathered material related to housing estates built between 1939 and 1966 in Brazil. The project was chosen to be published by the Ministry of Culture in a public tender and resulted in a collection launched in 2014 with 3 volumes.
