Lydia Kallipoliti

Selected Bibliography

Endangered Pieces of Nature and the Architecture of Closed Worlds
Thursday, November 10, 2016

About:

Lydia Kallipoliti is an architect, engineer and scholar, with a Master of Science in Architecture Studies from M.I.T, and a PhD from Princeton University. She is currently an Assistant Professor of Architecture at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute (RPI). Her research on the intersection of cybernetic and ecological theories crossbreeds scholarship with the scope of engaging a wide audience in what she calls ‘immersive scholarship.’

Kallipoliti is the founder of EcoRedux, an innovative online open-source educational resource documenting the history of ecological experimentation and ANAcycle thinktank in Brooklyn, New York. She is the recipient of numerous awards most notably, a silver medal in the W3 awards for digital innovation in environmental awareness. Her most recent research project, “Closed Worlds”, opened at the Storefront for Art and Architecture in February 2016.

Books:

Kallipoliti, Lydia. 2010. Ecoredux : Design Remedies for an Ailing Planet. Chichester: John Wiley. (Request via Inter-Library Loan)

Kallipoliti, Lydia. 2012. Eco Redux : Materials Off the Catalog + Remedies for a Dying Planet. Cambridge, Massachusetts. (Request via Inter-Library Loan)

Books listed above are available in the CCNY Architecture Library except where noted.
Articles (2006-2015):

Articles listed above are available in the CCNY Architecture Library except where noted.

Website:

EcoRedux : Design Remedies for a Dying Planet http://www.ecoredux.com

An archival & design resource for ecological material experiments