Sarah Williams Goldhagen: Selected Bibliography

Spitzer School of Architecture Lecture – February 7, 2013

About:

The New Republic’s architecture critic, she is a scholar and theorist of modern and contemporary architecture. Sarah Goldhagen has published widely in journals and newspapers including The New York Times and the Harvard Design Magazine. An MA and PhD graduate of Columbia University’s Department of Art History and Archaeology, she taught for a decade at Harvard’s School of Design and has taught at Wellesley, Vassar, and the School of Architecture at the University of Texas at Austin. Co-founder of the new journal, Positions: On Modern Architecture and Urbanism/Histories and Theories, she also serves on the boards of the Society of Architectural Historians and ArchitectureBoston.

Books:

Books listed above are available in the CCNY Architecture Library except where noted.

Articles: (Selected from 2001 to 2009 )

NOTE: A limited number of Sarah Goldhagen’s architecture columns in The New Republic are available full-text online through the library’s A to Z eJournals list. Search for The New Republic by title. For those articles unavailable online, request them through Inter-Library Loan from the online listing.

"Positioning Positions." Goldhagen, Sarah Williams. Positions, 2008 Fall, n.0, entire issue (93p.). Available online through the library’s A to Z eJournals list.

Web Sites:
http://www.sarahwilliamsgoldhagen.com/